Spurgeon on the Book of Isaiah

This is a case of when God visits a nation with terrible judgements.

When the Jews were led away captive into Babylon, the great men of the land were bound in chains and treated as common slaves. And as they marched across the weary wilderness, the iron entered into their souls. Then was the loftiness of their spirit bowed down; and the pride of the king, who laughed at the prophet, was laid low.

God has wondrous ways of making people feel they are but dust, but when nothing else can serve his turn, he will sweep away whole dynasties, as one removes an anthill when it has become a nuisance. One of the greatest works of grace in the heart is to humble our pride

To know the will of God is the greatest knowledge;

To find the will of God is the greatest discovery;

To do the will of God is the greatest achievement.

- George W. Truett

Without God we should fear to move: But, when He bids us go, it is dangerous to tarry
