A Thankful Heart

After one of the terrible battles of the Civil War, a dying Confederate soldier asked to see the chaplain. When the chaplain arrived, he supposed the young man would wish him to beseech God for his recovery; but it was different.

First, the soldier asked him to cut off a lock of his hair for his mother, and then he asked him to kneel down and thank God.

"What for?" asked the surprised chaplain.

"For giving me such a mother. Thank God that I am a Christian. And thank God for giving me grace to die with. And thank God for the home He has promised me over there." And so the chaplain knelt down by the dying man, and in his prayer he had praise and gratitude.

If thou are singing a hymn, thou art praising God. Then the hymn comes to an end, and it is time for a meal. If thou keepest thyself from overeating, thou wilt be praising God.

Dost thou labour as a farmer? Be sure there are no weeds left in the ground thou art digging. This too will be an opportunity for praising God.

Thus by the innocency of thy labours thou can't praise God all day long.

- St. Augustine (354-430)
