Principles of Bible Study—Pt 2

By Dr. Frank Charles Thompson
(Developed the Thompson Chain Reference Bible)

2.) Conscious Need Is Essential

The Bible should be studied as eagerly as a hungry person seeks for bread. The formal reading of a portion of the Word each day may have some value as a religious exercise; but to receive the full benefit from the Word, its truths must be appropriated.

The delivery person on a bakery truck may handle a thousand loaves of bread a day, and yet go home hungry at night; similarly, Bible readers may peruse large portions of the Word of God with little profit unless they make it their own and feed on it.

A Special Place

A true church is not the building—
 It's the worshippers within—
 It's all who've found salvation
 And forgiveness of their sin.

But as we gather in this building
 It becomes a special place
 To worship and give thanks to Him
 For His all-saving grace.

For here He truly blesses us,
 And we know our Lord is near,
 For we're "two or three together,"
 And He tells us He is here!

We raise voices in praise music
 To let our joy be known
 That we will someday see His face
 For we've become His own.

May we constantly be growing—
 Not just in members' size,
 But in wisdom and enlightenment
 That opens sin-blind eyes.

May those who walk in darkness
 In need of hope and grace,
 Enter through this building's door,
 Find here a special place!
