One of the great preachers of the past, the saintly Rutherford, went through persecutions beyond the lot of most men. Yet at the end of his life he could write:

Deep waters crossed life's pathway,
The hedge of thorns was sharp;
Now these all lie behind me,
Oh, for a well-tuned harp!

It is wonderful that a man who has been through suffering akin to those of Job, should cry out in desire for a heart to praise the Lord.

Pastor's Note: Samuel Rutherford (1600-1661) was a contender for the faith. He was often banished from ministries, forced to resign, had his books burned, was charged with treason, and had severe illnesses. Yet he affected Scotland profoundly. He once said, "The plough of my Lord maketh deep furrows on my soul... [but] He prospereth a crop."

From the autobiography of the late Dr. Clarence E Macartney comes the following humorous tale.

Two men were passing through a field in the country when they were charged by a bull. They started for the nearest fence; but it was soon apparent that they could not make it before the bull would be upon them.

One said to the other, "Put up a prayer, John. We're in for it!"

But John answered, "I can't. I never made a public prayer in my life."

"But you must," said his companion, "the bull will soon be upon us. Pray, John, and pray quickly."

"All right," said John, "I'll give you the only prayer I know, the one my father used to repeat at the table; 'O Lord, for what we are about to receive, make us truly thankful.'"
