You Invited Me Here

When I arrive in that heavenly city
 Where never comes sorrow or care
 I'll say to my dear, precious mother,
 "It was you who invited me here
 To Christ alone be the glory:
 He my sins in His body did bear.
 Yet to heaven I might not have come
 Had you not invited me here"
 - Anon.

My Mother taught me that promises that could not be kept should not be made. She believed it was better to act without promising than to promise without acting! However, she made an allowance for unforeseen difficulties in this way: "Always try to pay your debts before they are due. But if you find that you owe someone on a certain date and you can't pay, walk right up to that person and pay something - even if it's only a dollar or two. Tell him you're sorry you can't pay it all - and pay it as soon as you can."
 - Paul Levin
