What is the Book of I Chronicles about?

The books of the Kings tell the history of the kings from man's viewpoint--the prophet's view, while the book of the Chronicles tells the story of the kings from God's viewpoint--the priest's view.

An examination of the material in the Chronicles demonstrates that they were written with a primary focus on Judah and the Davidic line of the kings, and an emphasis centered on the Temple in Jerusalem. The Chronicles demonstrates the moral reasons for the history of Judah and its focus is on the functions of the Priesthood.

"Proofs" From Mount of Transfiguration

The sudden appearance of Moses and Elijah on the mount (Luke 9:30) settles many age-long questions—

First, on the life after death.

The appearance of these dead saints, very much alive, demonstrated that there is life after death. Though Elijah didn't really die.

Second, on reincarnation. Moses and Elijah appeared as individual persons. They were not reincarnated under other forms of creatures. There is nothing here of Hindu "karma", which supposedly issues in a nirvana of self-extinction by absorption into an impersonal Buddha.

Third, on recognition of saints. Moses was still recognized as Moses, and Elijah was still Elijah. We will be able to recognize each other in the resurrection.

Fourth, on soul sleep. This disproves the theory of soul sleep, as both Moses and Elijah were alive consciously and in conversation.

Fifth, on glorified bodies. Moses and Elijah had bodies which could suddenly appear and disappear; similar in structure, height, and appearance, yet different in texture. This gives up a glimpse of our future resurrected bodies.

Sixth, fellowship of saints. Moses and Elijah evidently enjoyed fellowship in heaven, as they talked with Christ.

Seventh, knowledge of earthly events. Moses and Elijah were apparently intelligently in touch with earth. They talked with Jesus of "His decease which He should accomplish at Jerusalem." They are absolutely joyful and forever satisfied in their glorified state.
