Dear Big People,

Thank you for all the cards, gifts, money, and food you gave my family when I was born. My mom says I'll understand and appreciate it when I'm older, and not so entitled and demanding (whatever that means). My dad loved all the food, my mom loved all the practical gifts and "adorable" clothes (ahem, I prefer "handsome"), and my sister confiscated all the toys. My parents also appreciate all 652 diapers and 3,376 (!) wipes.

Sincerely, Orion Arthur Tablante

"It seems to be the general rule of the moral universe that those who do their work with all their hearts prosper, while those who go to their labor leaving half their hearts behind them are almost certain to fail. Who are the young people who rise in the establishment? Not the people who sleep behind the counter, who are glad to avoid a customer. Who are merchants who succeed? The lazy slackers? No. Those who are diligent in their business, who do what they do with both their hands."

- Charles Spurgeon

"Dream. Dream big. It doesn't cost any more to dream big than dream small, so dream big. And if your dreams don't come to pass, at least you can say 'I had a good dream.'"

- Evangelist Curtis Hudson
