Our Hearts' Journey

For those of us who love our Lord
 We need no special day
 For our hearts and thoughts to travel
 To a place so far away—

To seem to come within the shadow
 Of the cross where Jesus died,
 Where long ago His saving blood
 Flowed from His precious side—

To see the image of His arms
 Stretched on the wide cross-bar,
 Results of beatings and of thorns
 That His blessed brow did mar—

To see the imprints in His hands
 Of nails that pierced and tore—
 Hands that held and children blessed,
 And touched men to health restore—

If that dark scene was all there was,
 What hopelessness we'd face—
 But our thoughts soon rush ahead
 To reach another place—

A garden tomb where mammoth stone
 Placed in its entrance-way
 Has by Heaven's angels' hands
 Been simply rolled away—

A place where Mary Magdelene,
 Grieving, early came,
 And standing nearby, weeping,
 Heard her Master speak her name—

A place where two disciples
 Peered into the darkened gloom,
 And found to their astonishment,
 It was an empty tomb!

Often to that empty sepulcher
 From Calvary's cross so grim,
 Our hearts and thoughts do travel
 In remembrance of Him—

To recall our Saviour risen,
 Breaking death and sin's cruel hold,
 And now He has prepared a place for us
 Where His glory we'll behold!
