Love's Beauty

Now that Autumn has unfurled
 All its beauty on the world
 In brilliant orange and flaming red,
 I'll not grieve that summer's dead.

In this brief beauty I'll find rest,
 Reminded how my life's been blessed.
 And I'll not dread harsh winter's bite—
 My Lord has known the coldest night.

Betrayed and hung on Calvary's tree,
 How could He so forgiving be,
 To save, then show in splended ways
 His loving blessings all my days?

For all around me His love speaks,
 In flowered fields and mountain peaks,
 In gleaming lakes and star—filled skies—
 Yes, all around His beauty lies.

And though I know each sunset's glow
 Begins to fade and soon will go,
 Though bright leaves must scatter down
 And, withered, turn to lifeless brown,

Though treasured beauty I'd hold fast
 In this, my earthly life, can't last,
 I know He in Heaven waits to share
 His everlasting beauty there.
