Missionaries

Out into the wilderness
 With God's message in their hearts,
 Bravely march those faithful ones
 To earth's strange and unknown parts,

Seeking those who vainly struggle
 To find a life or peace,
 To help those whose lives are full of sin
 And fears that never cease,

To reach hungry hearts in need of food
 That only God can give—
 That spiritual kind of diet
 That gives life meaning here to live,
 To bring that precious saving message
 Of our Saviour's sacrifice
 That men's eyes and hearts may open
 To a love that paid such price

That all who truly seek Him
 May find freedom from their grief
 Of sin's burden and the fear of death
 And know salvation's sweet relief.

In Africa's steamy climate
 Or in Alaska's arctic chill,
 In deepest poverty or danger,
 They're there to do God's will.

In a world of wrath and grim despair,
 Midst rejection, ridicule, and scorn,
 They bring the precious Hope of Jesus—
 And of sin's destruction warn.

Oh, to those who face the wilderness—
 In jungles and in cities, too—
 We owe such a debt of gratitude
 For God's work we won't or cannot do!
