Thirst

The farmer struggled in the field—
 His throat was hot and dry.
 "Oh, for an easing of my thirst!"
 He whispered with a sigh.

A few feet from the farmer
 There was a deep, cold well—
 Why he didn't draw from it,
 Who could ever tell?

A Christian struggled in the world—
 He spoke with great despair:
 "Oh, if there was only hope—
 Someone to help somewhere!"

A few feet from the Christian—
 A Bible near at hand—
 Why he didn't reach for it,
 Who could understand?

We'd say that farmer's foolish
 To suffer needlessly
 When his help so nearby
 Surely he can see!

But aren't we just as foolish
 To suffer fear and doubt
 When we can draw from God's Word
 In what seems spirit—drought?
